

GEORGE P. VOURVOULIAS, III

MARITIME ATTORNEY | LEGAL COMMENTATOR | SPEAKER

Fighting for the People Who Keep America Moving

George Vourvoulis has dedicated his career to representing injured seamen, offshore workers, and maritime professionals. With more than two decades of experience and a Master of Laws in Admiralty and Maritime Law from Tulane University, he focuses exclusively on helping workers navigate some of the most complex and high stakes cases in the legal system.

Known for his relentless preparation and client first approach, George believes every case begins with understanding the person behind the injury and the story of how it happened. He has built a reputation for telling his clients' stories with authenticity, compassion, and conviction, helping juries understand the real impact of life changing maritime injuries.

As a speaker, George shares practical insights on maritime law, workplace safety, the Jones Act, and the legal rights of offshore workers. His presentations combine real world experience with clear, engaging education, leaving audiences with a deeper understanding of the challenges facing America's maritime workforce and the laws designed to protect them.
